Janice Case is an educator with 20+ years experience in both private and public school education. Most recently, Mrs. Case served as the principal of Potomac Falls High School in Loudoun, Virginia. Her extensive public school experience includes middle and high school principal, high school assistant principal, and special education teacher. Her private school experience includes providing residential and school based instruction for children and adults with significant disabilities as well as program supervision over multiple sites and programs.

As a school leader Mrs. Case was active at the state and national levels in her roles as State Coordinator and Executive Board member for the Virginia Association of Secondary School Principals. She contributed to numerous committees and task forces including task forces at both the state and national level responsible for cultivating and implementing new teacher and principal evaluation standards and practices.

For the last twelve years, Mrs. Case has provided consultant services in the way of professional development to schools and school leaders nationwide. She has collaborated with the National Association of Secondary School Principals, the Virginia Association of Secondary School Principals, the Virginia Foundation for Education Leadership, and the Virginia Department of Education to provide professional learning experiences on a wide range of topics targeted toward supporting school leaders and teachers through the school transformation process. In January 2014 Mrs. Case completed the National Institute for School Leadership Executive Development Program and is certified to train other school leaders.
